Barber-Surgeons

Imagine going to the same person whether you needed your hair cut, a tooth pulled, or your arm amputated. That is exactly what you would have done if you lived in Europe between the 12th and 18th centuries. In those days, university-trained physicians felt that surgery was beneath them. It was thought to be that grisly, bloody work did not require an education. The work naturally fell to barbers who already had sharp tools and the skills to use them. While these barber-surgeons did help some of their patients, many of them did not survive their treatments due to infection and loss of blood.
